

Dr. Sotiris Hji-Avgoustis is a professor and chair of the Indiana University Department of Tourism, Conventions and Event Management, the fastest growing department in the Indiana University System.

His research interests are in the area of city tourism and particularly cultural tourism, sports tourism and convention tourism. He has published extensively in national and international journals on these topics.

He is also a leader in distance education, specifically in the use of the Internet to reach a growing segment of a student population that is increasingly location bound.

In the areas of service to the global community and the profession, Dr. Hji-Avgoustis has been involved with numerous professional national and international associations serving in leadership roles and positions. His involvement with Heliotopos is just one of the many examples in this area.

His teaching expertise includes the delivery of courses in tourism economics, tourism entrepreneurship and tourism financial accounting and decision making.